WHY

THIS PROGRAMME

Remote work, telework or work from home has emerged as a norm rather than a privilege during the Covid crisis challenging the way in which work was ever envisaged or imagined. While some firms in the IT industry had some practices towards WFH and managing global, remote talent; for many other industry leaders, this change was unprecedented. This has forced them to develop new skills on managing remote employees. The new team structure mandates sensitization towards challenges of an employee working remotely and often working from home or shared space; leading through style differences which are often subtle yet important in virtual world. Alongside, also find newer methods of Human resource anchors that enable the seamless work through remote employees.

The four weekend programme is designed to equip the managers and leaders to learn how to manage self, others and learning the skills of managing the remote employees in absence of non-verbal and verbal cues through virtual empathy.

PEDAGOGY

The workshop will be conducted online on MS Team. The program anchor is Prof Anamika, The sessions will be power packed with psychometric tests, online and offline simulations, lectures, case studies and recorded best practices by Industry experts as pre-workshop-work. Industry experts will also be invited to discuss the true nuances of dealing with the remote work.
