

Introduction: Goa Institute of Management (GIM) is pleased to host 2nd international conference on the theme “COVID-19 and economy recovery in Asia-Pacific region” during 10-11 October, 2022.

Scope of Call for Papers: The ongoing COVID-19 pandemic has had far reaching repercussions on the social, economic and financial growth and development of economies globally. With the advent of vaccines, the effects of the pandemic have eased and economies have resumed business as usual in many parts of the world. This return to normality has been made possible in large part to a suite of economic policies aimed at aiding recovery and return to pre-pandemic times. Globally, though, many challenges and uncertainty exist in terms of whether or not countries can achieve full recovery and, if they do, how long will it take to achieve such recovery. Given where we are now as a global economy particularly faced with new challenges in the form of geopolitical tensions and rising food prices and costs of production, it is important to focus on the post-pandemic recovery face and understand where we are in our pursuit towards recovery.

The conference welcome papers, both empirical and theory-based papers that have clear practical relevance to policy, on the following topics:

- Macroeconomic challenges faced in countries pursuit to recovery from COVID-19
- The role of monetary and fiscal policies in recovery from COVID-19
- Challenges to global trade networks and global value chains in the recovery from COVID-19
- The resilience of financial markets in the post-COVID-19 phase
- Regulatory frameworks, banking sector stability, resilience and risks in the recovery from COVID-19
- Lessons from sectoral growth and firm performance during recovery from COVID-19
- How relevant will be technological innovations and digital currency?
- Renewable energy and growth challenges in the recovery from COVID-19
- Medical and health infrastructure, investments and medicine supply networks in the recovery from COVID-19
